When Your Pet Can't Sleep

Pets are almost as likely as their owners to suffer from occasional insomnia. A sleepless dog can hinder an entire family's sleep by wandering the house, whimpering, or getting into mischief. Several scenarios can lead to bouts of animal insomnia. Dogs occasionally react to stress with restlessness and nervousness that prevents sleep. A new person in the house, fighting among family members, or a move can trigger insomnia. Insufficient amounts of exercise can cause sleeplessness in dogs, cats, and other animals. Weather changes such as extreme heat or an approaching storm can make pets restless. Conditions like fleas, allergies, arthritis, diabetes, and kidney disease may also lead to discomfort and sleeplessness. A pet's veterinarian should be consulted when insomnia persists.

Should you notice any problem, from scratching or sneezing to frequent urination or difficulty in moving, it is time to see your pet's veterinarian. Appointments can be made by calling us 630-553-7436.

Pet of the Month

Wibbits

Wibbits is the world's cutest, softest wabbit and my cat Daisy & I love him to pieces. Wibbits is litter trained and shares a litter box with his friend Daisy the cat.

Physical Rehabilitation & Massage for Dogs

While many individuals have embraced complementary and alternative therapies, some canines are also reaping the rewards of physical rehabilitation and massage. Keys to success include finding properly trained therapists and communicating consistently with the animal's primary care veterinarian. Rehabilitation may help with an animal's musculoskeletal, skin, respiratory, or digestive problems. Physical rehabilitation has also enhanced recovery after surgical procedures, especially orthopedics. Massage can help animals suffering from muscle degeneration, cramps, circulatory problems, or soft tissue injuries.

Your veterinarian is the best person to contact for information on all types of treatments for your pet. Give us a call at (630) 553-7436 for all your needs.

P.S. We have a licensed physical therapist on our healthcare team.

CVC Team Announcements

Congratulations!

This month's "Employee of the Month" is Amy. Amy is a Certified Veterinary Technician here at Countryside Veterinary Clinic. She was elected employee of the month for extraordinary patient care and teamwork. Amy is dedicated to patient care and her knowledge allows her to efficiently assist the veterinarian with outpatient and inpatient care. She always begins and ends her day with a smile and shows willingness to help fellow teammates. To show appreciation Countryside Veterinary Clinic awards Amy "Employee of the Month".
